BUILDING DESTROYED BY FIRE—A concrete block building on US-90, Waveland, Friday night was destroyed by an explosion and fire according to Don McIntyre, Waveland fire chief. The building sub-leased by Shuttle Technology, Inc., was used as a storage area, and was completely destroyed while

Building containing radioactive materials destroyed by explosion

By ELLIS CUEVAS

A Friday night explosion and fire destroyed a US-90 Waveland building containing radioactive materials according to Don McIntyre, Waveland fire chief.

McIntyre said, "The radioactive materials were encased in lead lined containers which were in a vault locked with a padlock and chain. There were no damages to the vault or radioactive materials, and no hazardous fumes or materials were released during the fire."

The building was subleased by Shuttle Technology, Inc. and is owned by Ron McCullough and leased to James Keaton, McIntyre said.

"During the fire, radioactive monitoring was done by Joe Casanova of Shuttle Technology, and Robert Clark, Hancock County Civil Defense radiological monitoring officer. No contamination was released. We had to make sure of this in order to protect firefighters," McIntyre stated.

An alarm was turned in at 10:33 p.m. for the fire according to McIntyre, with the explosion being heard as far away as North Bay St. Louis.

"There was a butane tank inside the concrete block building with its top off. We do not know if it caused the explosion or not, but State Fire Marshal Norman Cowart of Wiggins is now checking the origin of the fire and explosion," McIntyre said Saturday.

The fire chief continued, "The A-frame building which is used as an office next to the concrete block building received some damage, but is still useable. There were no injuries reported during the firefighting operations."

Traffic on US-90 was re-routed from both lanes for one hour with the east lane remaining closed for two hours.

Traffic control was handled by Waveland Police with assistance from Hancock County sheriff's deputies, Bay St. Louis police and Mississippi Highway Scale officers.

Firefighters and two engines from Waveland and one from Bay St. Louis responded to the scene. Assistance was also given by Hancock County firefighters.

Borg-Warner official feels:

Hunters endangering chemical plant, workers

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Port Bienville Industrial Park firm fears hunters stalking prey near the company's property lines present a 'serious and potentially dangerous situation.'

A letter from Paul Vegas of Borg-Warner Chemicals, Inc. explaining the situation was read to the Hancock County Board of Supervisors at its Friday morning meeting by Walter Gex, board attorney.

In the letter, the corporation agrees to share costs to improve security and regulate access to the industrial park. Vegas states in the letter it is 'unnerving' to have deer and rabbit hunters along property lines because a stray bullet could injure an employee or damage equipment possibly causing a chemical leak.

Borg-Warner has its own security force and its 200-acre site is closed to the public, but Vegas reports the company 'has had problems with people hunting and pilfering.'

Borg-Warner feels the industrial park's main entrance should be patrolled and the entire park should be posted against trespassers.

W. Wilson Webre, outgoing County Port and Harbor Commission executive director, also noted Atlas Powder Co. (another park tenant) regularly moves explosive materials through the port.

He feared a stray bullet hitting a ship laden with explosives could be dangerous.

Webre said four years ago he attempted to make the entire industrial park a game refuge because the county has no laws to regulate hunters.

"Making the park a game refuge would make it unlawful to bring a dog or gun into the area," he stated.

The outgoing director also reported some Port Bienville industries will not provide funds for improving security even though the park covenants require all tenants to share costs for such protection.

Webre said although law enforcement officials are called to apprehend trespassers, they are usually gone by the time lawmen arrive.

The park must also allow access through the facility to a nearby lodge, he noted.

He suggested surrounding landowners be encouraged to join in a game refuge.

Mary Caillier, a spectator at the meeting, asked if the supervisors could do something about hunting dogs fighting and killing pets on private property.

A.A. (Dolph) Kellar, board president, replied, "We can't do anything about it Mrs. Caillier."

Regarding a Hunt Energy Corp. refinery on Brown Road in the Catahoula Oil and Gas Field, the board granted a 10-year exemption on all taxes except County School District taxes for the Hunt facility.

The company sought a tax exemption as a public utility, Gex explained. In reading a letter from Hunt, Gex said the assessed value of the plant is $608,873 and the annual employee payroll for the facility is $305,000.

Regarding County Sheriff's Department deputies, Kellar warned Sheriff Ronald A. Peterson that all new deputies must graduate from the State Police Academy within one year of their employment or they lose authority to arrest anyone.

Peterson said when a deputy is hired, a request is sent immediately requesting admission to the academy, but

Large, mysterious object in Bienville harbor bottom

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

The Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission Thursday night agreed to rent a crane to remove a mysterious large metal object unearched during dredging operations in the Port Bienville Industrial Park harbor.

W. Wilson Webre, outgoing commission executive director, urged the board to rent the crane to remove the object and other debris which is damaging cutter blades of a dredge deepening the harbor. The dredge is owned and operated by Ed Nemer Construction Co. of Florence, Ala.

Webre reported the dredge operator has attempted in vain to dislodge the object found under eight feet of mud.

The dredge dug away 25 feet of muck, but could not continue digging over or under the object without damaging the blades, Webre said.

He speculated the object could have been dumped overboard during initial construction of the park or from a vessel docked at the port.

"The (dredge) operator is disgusted because he's running into steel, concrete and everything else (on the harbor bottom)," Webre stated.

Webre reported the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Mobile, Ala. Office has approved the dredge temporarily moving into another area of the port channel to clear a shoaled area, but feared Nemer would not move back to work the harbor unless he is assisted in removing the debris.

The crane could operate from the terminal dock, Webre said.

He noted the harbor must be dredged to a 12 to 14-foot depth.

James DeBlanc, incoming director, reported the dredge has completed half of the harbor dredging.

Engineer Mike Smith of Advanced Developments, Inc. of Bay St. Louis said the crane could be rented based on standard prices listed in a state blue book.

Robert Genin, a commission attorney, said if a dragline could be rented below the established state rate the board would not have to seek bids.

Commissioner Ronald Artigues jokingly said the large steel object might be a large drum of marijuana.

The U.S. Customs Service docks vessels confiscated in drug arrests at the port.

Regarding the dredging project which also includes restoring the depth of the port entrance channel, the commission agreed to reduce the contract by 2,000 cubic yards of material based on revised engineer calculations.

In reference to a dredging area site owned by Jim Kelly, the commission agreed to $100 per acre for dumping the material on the 8.52-acre area as recommended by Webre.

Two sentenced to Parchman

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Two persons were found guilty in circuit court jury trials last week and sentenced to serve time in the State Penitentiary at Parchman on Friday, according to Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson.

Peterson said, "In a jury trial Friday, Alvin DeGraw was found guilty of the burglary of a Waveland residence in 1982, and sentenced to seven years at Parchman by Judge J. Ruble Griffin."

"A Friday sentence of four years was given by Griffin to Jerry Wayne Carver for aggravated assault in a Pearlington incident. He was found guilty earlier in the week, and sentence was issued Friday," Peterson added.

Carver allegedly stole a shotgun from a pickup truck in Pearlington and fired it at the owner of a business establishment, Peterson stated.

March of Dimes reports record

Public contributions to the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation in fiscal year 1982 totaled $75,963,943 according to the recently released annual report of the voluntary health organization.

Some $103,963 was raised by the Mississippi Gulf Coast Chapter.

The total is an 8.5 percent increase over funds raised the previous year, and a record income in the 44-year history of the organization.

In its 1982 annual report, the March of Dimes looks to its history to provide direction for the future.

"We see evidence of solid and often historic accomplishment in every area of our work," writes George S. Dillon, board chairman.

"Despite these successes, we know that the demands of our mission are such that we cannot pause for celebration. As our knowledge of birth defects has increased, it brings the sobering realization that our task is much more formidable than anyone thought."

The report notes the "exciting promise that premature births, the leading cause of newborn deaths, may be sharply reduced through the work of the March of Dimes grantees."

A multi-center trial program in pre-term birth prevention is being funded by the March of Dimes, following dramatic successes in its trial at the University of California, San Francisco.

The work being done to save premature babies from death or defect is the focus of this year's report.

March of Dimes research support this year — totaling $9,558,921 — continues efforts to detect, diagnose, and discover remedies for the problem of more than 250,000 babies born with birth defects each year in the United States.

The March of Dimes is "greatly encouraged by another year of significant progress toward the prevention of birth defects," said Dillon. Yet he says there is still much work to be done.

In addition to research support, the March of Dimes spent $5,205,132 on professional education, $15,710,804 on public health education, $16,778,860 on community services and $5,920,527 on medical services.

Kidnapping plea entered in Pearlinton incident

A Gretna, La. man, accused of carnal knowledge of a minor in Pearlinton, has pleaded guilty to kidnapping charges.

A Navy deserter, he has pleaded guilty to federal charges that he kidnapped a 9-year-old Algiers girl last October.

Thomas Wayne Salisbury, 540 Willowbrook Drive, Gretna, faces possible life imprisonment as a result of his guilty plea before Judge A. J. (Buddy) McNamara in a New Orleans Federal District Court.

McNamara ordered a pre-sentence investigation of Salisbury, but set no sentencing date.

The charge against Salisbury claimed that on or about Oct. 2 he kidnapped the girl "for the purpose of sexual gratification and otherwise" and took her from New Orleans to Mississippi and back to Louisiana.

Salisbury forced the girl into his 1966 blue Cadillac as she was playing at the Bodenger Playground in Algiers and took her to a wooded area in Pearlinton where he sexually abused her, according to the government.

Salisbury had told the girl and a 10-year-old boy at the playground that he was a policeman and was going to write them a ticket for trespassing, Assistant U.S. Attorney Louis Moore said.

Salisbury released the girl later in the day about three blocks from her Algiers home, Moore said.

She was able to retrace Salisbury's route and describe him, the car and the wooded area in detail, he said.

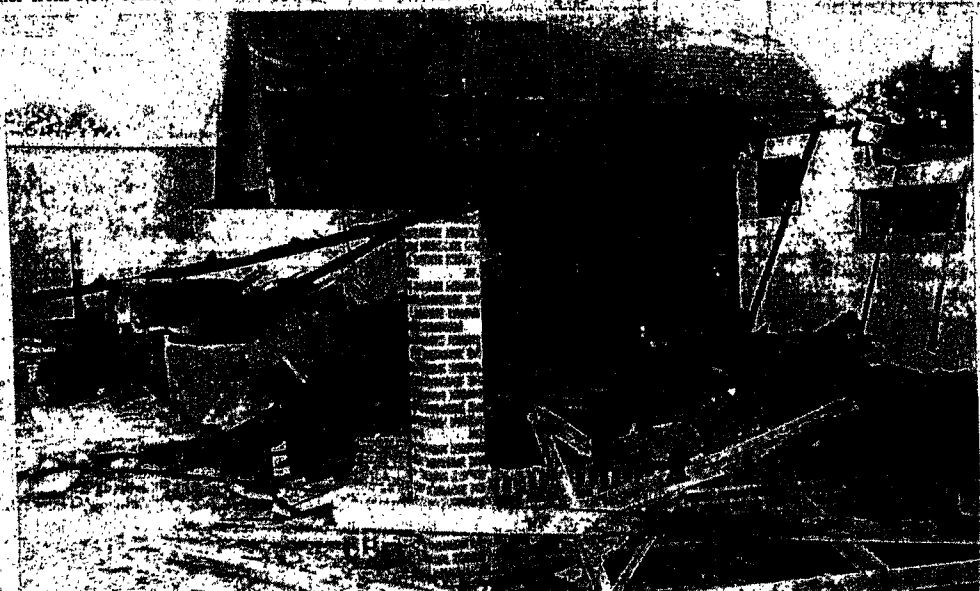

Salisbury was positively identified

Moore said, by two young girls in Pearlinton who saw him with the kidnapped youngster after his car got stuck in a mud puddle there and by a man who hauled the car out of the mud, according to Moore.

Four days after the kidnapping, one of Salisbury's relatives contacted the FBI to say he believed Salisbury had kidnapped the girl because Salisbury and his car fit descriptions released by the FBI, Moore said.

The relative also told the FBI that Salisbury had committed a similar offense in Newport News, Va., last year and escaped from custody while awaiting trial.

Salisbury, arrested five days after the kidnapping, admitted to the offense during questioning by FBI agents, according to Moore.

his officers frequently must wait one year before an opening at the academy is available.

He reported two new deputies are now waiting to attend the school.

Just after the meeting, Keller said Thursday he attended a traditional legislative breakfast in Jackson in which State Attorney General Bill Allain informed the officials of the requirement.

The board president said he informed Peterson of the necessary training because the supervisors are ultimately liable for any improper actions by the department.

REAL VIEWS ON REAL ESTATE

PRIORITY OF LIENS

I am interested in bidding on some commercial property at a foreclosure sale. Can you tell me what happens when two or more liens attach to the same property and if so, which lien has priority in a foreclosure action? E.Z. Belsont

Dear E.Z.:

The priority of liens is important when insufficient monies are generated in a foreclosure sale to satisfy all liens.

If a senior lienholder is the party bringing the foreclosure action, all junior liens are extinguished at the sale.

But when a junior lienholder brings a foreclosure action, the property is sold subject to all existing senior liens.

In order to determine the priority of liens, you should be familiar with the treatment of three basic rules in each state.

In most states specific liens and special assessments take priority over all private liens no matter when the private liens have been attached.

This helps explain why many mortgage lenders require that property taxes be paid in advance into an escrow account; or that some mortgages make nonpayment of property taxes and special assessments a default of the mortgage.

Priority of all other liens, except for specific statutory exceptions such as mechanic's liens, are defined by the state's recording statute.

The general rule is that the lien which is first recorded is superior to all subsequent liens.

Thirdly, irrespective of the rule of priorities established by the state's recording statute, in some states subsequent recorded mechanic's liens may nevertheless still have priority.

Before bidding on the property you mentioned, a real estate attorney should be consulted. Upon examining the particulars, he or she should be able to advise you as to the legal status of all the liens on the property.

For answers to questions, write Dr. Dennis Tosh, P. O. Box 296, University, Miss. 38677.

THREE SIMPLE MINI-GREENHOUSES!

One of the least expensive ways to stretch your garden's growing season is by constructing an easy-to-build cold frame from recycled materials. It doesn't have to be fancy, but the hot-house should be tightly assembled to reduce heat loss... its glass top should slant to the south... and its frame should be sheltered against the wall of a house or outbuilding on its north side.

You don't even have to have a "right" size for your homemade mini-greenhouse. Look around the nearest dump or salvage yard until you find some glassed window sashes that measure approximately 3 X 6 feet. Decide how many of the windows you want to use on top of your cold frame, and construct a "box" on which to mount them.

A simple rectangle of rough planks (1-1/2 or 2 inches thick) will do the job just fine. Make the frame 24 inches tall at the back and about 16 inches high across the front. Set the structure about 4 inches into the ground, drive stakes solidly into the earth inside at all four corners, and nail the planks to the posts for greater strength.

Then spread a couple of inches of gravel inside the cold frame (to insure good drainage) and hinge the old windows on top so they can be swung up and securely propped open whenever you want to reach inside the unit or ventilate the interior of the box.

Your crop house should warm up enough to allow you to start flats of plants four to six weeks earlier than normal in the spring. It will also furnish you with fresh salad greens far into the fall and winter... and the frame can even serve as a storage area for root crops during exceptionally cold weather.

On the other hand, should you decide to plant directly in the garden this spring, make some portable greenhouses to help the little sprouts come along. Large containers, such as peanut butter jars and translucent plastic milk jugs, can be recycled to become just perfect for baby plant protectors.

The peanut butter containers, of course, are the easiest to use. Just take off their lids, wash the glass vessels, and turn them upside down over whatever sprouts in your vegetable patch need protection! However, translucent plastic milk jugs work even better as garden plant protectors, since it's possible to regulate their internal temperatures by simply removing and replacing the lids. Merely cut the bottoms right out of the containers and set the jugs upright over your early transplants and seeds.

You can make a simple indoor cold frame very easily, too. Just line a cardboard box with plastic, bend two large half-loops from coat hanger wires, and set up one of these arched supports in each end of the box. After placing soil and seeds in the container, put the whole arrangement into a large, clear plastic garbage bag that's tied with a twister. Presto! An instant closed system that keeps the seedlings very moist and relatively warm when placed in front of a window... yet can be opened easily when you want to inspect, water, or aerate the plants.

Q: Before I begin using my fireplace, can you give me any suggestions as to how I may be able to save fuel?

A: Close the damper when the fireplace is not in use. (Be sure the fire is completely out before you do this.) Leaving the damper open wastes a lot of heat. If your fireplace doesn't have a damper, stuff a newspaper a little way up the flue. Pull the paper down and use it to start the next fire.

Don't build a roaring fire. Big fires waste fuel because the heat goes up the chimney before you can use it. Burn wood and coals slowly. If you don't have an outside source of air for your fireplace, you can put a vent in your floor to feed air to the fire. A vent will reduce the amount of air which is drawn across the room from cracks around windows and doors.

Q: I keep a 100-watt bulb burning in my kitchen, near the phone, for 24 hours a day. Does that really cost me anything?

A: You might be surprised how much it costs you. For every 25 hours the light is on, the bulb draws 2,400 watts, or 2.4 kilowatts. At five cents per kilowatt hour that's twelve cents a day.

Twelve cents a day may not sound like much, but remember, that's almost $44 dollars a year for ONE light bulb. You'd save money by turning it on only when you need it, and turning it off as soon as you're through talking. You might also consider replacing the light with a fluorescent fixture.

They usually work out well in the kitchen and they're a lot more efficient at producing the higher lighting levels that are helpful there.

Quotables by CUEVAS

This is the time of year when the majority of Americans begin to think about taxes and wonder if they are going to owe 'Uncle' more when April 15 rolls around.

We are very happy to hear about Congressman Trent Lott's effort in trying to repeal the recent proposal of a 10 percent tax on interest and dividends.

In our opinion this would just be an additional job for the banks and savings and loan associations to have to fund.

The government now receives reports on the interest earned by savers from financial institutions, so they know who receives and does not receive dividends.

It seems everywhere one turns today a new tax proposal is out to get money.

Congratulations are in order this week for Pearlinton residents Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Giveans on the celebration of their 60th wedding anniversary last Thursday.

This couple reared two children in addition to five of Mrs. Giveans' brothers and sisters when her mother died.

Not only have the Giveans been married 60 years, they have also resided in the same house since marriage.

They have seen many a dramatic change take place in Pearlinton and have enjoyed living in the community.

Thursday was a busy day for the family as relatives and friends visited the couple at their home on Highway 604.

We wish them many more anniversary celebrations.

Persons driving Friday morning in the area had to take it easy because of the heavy fog.

It was a conversation piece until it cleared up, as it was the thickest to show up in some time.

Looks like every time it warms up a little, we are blanketed with fog which makes driving a problem.

We are glad everyone takes it easy, or most all motorists, as it is a dangerous time for driving.

Congressman Trent Lott is scheduled to hold a town meeting at the Hancock County Courthouse on Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m.

This will be a good time for residents to let our congressman know their feelings on matters of interest to them.

We hope there will be a large attendance to greet Congressman Lott.

Lions Club maintains waiting list for eyes

In this era when people often must even queue up to pay their bills, there is a waiting list for eyes.

This unusual waiting list has been described by Ms. Judy Kinsey, executive administrator of the Mississippi Lions Eye Bank, as made up of individuals who are blind and whose blindness was caused by a diseased or damaged cornea, the lens-like sheet of tissue which curls over the pupil and iris of the eye, much as a crystal curves over the face of a watch.

Such blindness, said Ms. Kinsey, can often be cured by means of a corneal transplant—transferring of human eye tissue from the eyes of a recently deceased person to those of the blind individual.

Because not enough people have pledged their eyes on death for this purpose, said Ms. Kinsey, the blind must "wait in line" for the sight-restoring operation.

Qualified ophthalmologists may apply to the Mississippi Lions Eye Bank for such human eye tissue, as it is available.

The eye bank then places the surgeon's name on the waiting list and the tissue is made available on a first-come, first-served basis, except in cases of emergency.

There are times, explained Kinsey, when eye tissue is desperately needed because of an accident involving the cornea of a person's eye and one is available, even from other eye banks.

This, she emphasized, points up the need for a much larger number of persons willing to pledge their eyes on death for this purpose.

Those wishing to donate their eyes after death may secure a pledge card by contacting Ms. Kinsey at 5455 Executive Place, Jackson, Ms 39206, or by asking any Lions Club member.

The Bottom Line

Candid Answers To Your Questions About Advertising and Business Topics.

By S. GALE DENLEY
Associate Professor of Journalism
University of Mississippi

What's going on with food merchandising? The television stations seem to be losing out, after making a toe-hold a year or so ago.

Dear To: Grocery industry consultant, Willard Bishop, pointed out in a recent issue of Advertising Age that even though most products are available nationally, which is in itself a new phenomenon, food advertising has yet to catch up and zero in on particular markets within a region or city.

Store managers have always fine-tuned their stock and displays for their local markets, but "the advertising resources have to be used more precisely. It can't be just like spreading peanut butter across bread," Mr. Bishop says. "Regions do make a difference. It's a fact that from the advertising point of view, you have a regional and sub-regional focus because of the proliferation of media."

"Local differences in newspaper ads are not so much because of regional differences rather than the quality of the local paper," says Clyde Nunn of the research department of the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, New York.

The bureau has just released the first findings of its 1982 nationwide survey of the food industry. It reports that 65% of an average supermarket's advertising budget is allotted to newspaper, 10% goes to television and 5% each for radio and direct mail.

Many stores ventured into broadcast advertising in the late 1970s, emphasizing "price more than image." But recession-battered shoppers turned to coupons, carefully examining the advertised specials — two shopping strategies that require a newspaper.

The other side of the coin is that store managers also cut back on using circulars, preferring run-of-press ads. Direct mail, hand-delivered pieces and ads in "shoppers" are used to target a specific market or neighborhood.

According to a recent Progressive Grocer survey, newspaper advertising was used by 94% of the stores in New England — its most popular area — and by 84% of stores in the Southwest, the medium's weakest area. Next week some specific strategies.

IN CONGRESS

By Cong.
Trent Lott

Legislation insuring that social security benefits continue to be paid while a disability investigation proceeds is expected to be signed into law soon, according to Congressman Trent Lott, R-Miss.

Lott said the legislation, which was cleared by Congress and sent to President Reagan, requires continued payments of social security and Medicare benefits to individuals who are undergoing an investigation to determine eligibility.

The payments would continue at least until an administrative law judge determines eligibility.

To qualify for continued benefits, however, individual recipients must contact their local social security office for detailed information.

The 1980 social security disability amendments required a review once every three years to determine eligibility for assistance. In many cases, benefits have been denied while the investigation progressed.

"The bill expected to be signed into law is careful to allow the Social Security Administration to remove ineligible persons from the rolls who are burdening the system at the expense of others," Lott said.

"At the same time, it will protect those deserving recipients who are finding themselves shortchanged by an unfortunate agency ruling which Congress has seen fit to correct," he said.

Payments under terms of the act will be effective through June, 1984, for termination decisions made prior to October, 1983.

Bail bondsman feels public defender case load is excessive

Dear Taxpayers,
It is time that you look and see where your tax dollars are going.

One place in particular that I would like to bring to your attention is the Public Defender System.

This is a much needed office and believe me, Mr. Frisbie, our public defender, has one heck of a case load as did Mrs. Sills before him.

I feel that a lot of this expense should not have to be paid by the taxpayer. Let's talk about some of the ways.

If you are incarcerated in jail there are three ways to get out:

1. A cash bond
2. A professional bondsman
3. A property bond

Certainly if you can afford a cash bond or a professional bondsman you can afford to pay an attorney, and of course, if you have property to make a bond you can sell or mortgage it to pay for an attorney.

After all, now that you have posted your bail you are free. You should now get off your behind and go to work and support yourself and family and pay for your own attorney.

If you are still incarcerated in jail and cannot bail yourself out, then maybe you are entitled to the free services of the public defender.

But I believe that once you post bail as mentioned above, you are not entitled to the free services of the public defender.

Our elected officials are doing a great job and we as taxpayers should give them, the judges, legislators and board of supervisors, our input on such matters.

I ask you, "Should we provide a public defender free of charge to those people who are out on bail and walking the streets?"

I say "Baa — Humbug."

We should also let out criminals know that they should abide by the old saying, "The two guys you always pay first are your bail bondsman and your lawyer."

Sincerely, Sid Sandoz

DAV outlines legislative priorities

The Sea Coast Echo
To the Editors

Dear Sir,

You might want to know where the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) stands on various issues.

We want to tell America's newsmen and women that the DAV will not stand for the kind of shoddy treatment of disabled veterans that some politicians proposed last year.

Among those proposals were two that we found particularly appalling:

—OMB wanted to strip benefits for families from veterans rated at 30 and 40% disabled.

This measure would have hit disabled veterans of the Vietnam War period harder than any other group because these veterans are far more likely to have young children at home.

The Senate passed a bill that would have denied any cost-of-living increase in the compensation of 88% of America's service-connected disabled veterans.

System considered too lenient

on perpetrators of violent crime

To The Editor,

I am a mother. I am also not a trouble maker and I never have been, but right is right.

I would like to know what has happened. Have we forgotten only God has the right to take a life? I am afraid here it seems that a DWI charge gets more than trying to kill someone.

And boy, have the women got it made — you men — do you realize a woman can do anything she wants — accuse you of anything and be in the right?

What law says that someone can accuse you of making a threat, get you put in jail, $5,000 bond, costs you $500 to get out — and they do not have to have any proof.

Even if and when it gets to court and you're not guilty, you still pay.
On the other hand, someone who shoots another person is put on $5,000 bond, gets out, and admitted it.

I have sat through my tears and fears for three weeks and have not said a word. Now I ask — What gives anyone the right to put another human through such pain?

I said I am not a trouble maker. I am a very hardworking woman trying to make a living and raise a family. I may not have as many votes here, but I pay as many taxes, and even if I didn't, I still ask —

What gives anyone the right to attempt to take a life? And why isn't our system following God's laws more than man's ideas? Are we a Christian nation or aren't we?

From a very worried family,

Crime Commission supports bills

January 12, 1983
The Editor

The Mississippi legislature is considering the following law enforcement bills, all of which have been sponsored by legislators from our Gulf Coast area:

1. The "Open Records" bill providing for public access to public records;
2. The "Drunk Driver" bill establishing mandatory punishment for those convicted of driving under the influence of drugs or intoxicants;
3. The "Mandatory Sentence" bill for those convicted of smuggling drugs; and
4. The "Narcotics Bureau Agents" bill to increase the number of Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics enforcement agents statewide.

The Mississippi Coast Crime Commission, at its annual meeting Tuesday, Jan. 11, voted unanimously to endorse each of these bills, and encourages all responsible citizens to join in pushing for their passage.

The "Open Records" bill establishes procedures to be followed when a public record custodian refuses to produce a public record for public inspection. It assures that private citizens and representatives of news media will have a prescribed course of action to follow if access to public records is refused. MCCC supports its adoption.

The "Drunk Driver" bill establishes mandatory punishment for those convicted of driving while intoxicated. MCCC believes it may help greatly reduce the slaughter on our highways.

The "Mandatory Sentence" for those convicted of drug smuggling was in a bill several years ago which increased the maximum dollar fines for drug smugglers, but was, somehow, deleted from the bill before final passage.

The current bill reinstates that provision to assure that drug smugglers cannot buy their way to freedom to continue drug smuggling.

MCCC believes this bill will reduce the use of our Gulf Coast as a point of entry for drug smugglers.

The "Narcotics Bureau Agents" bill is an effort to maintain sufficient manpower to stem the flood of illicit drugs which is inundating our Gulf Coast.

The President's Task Force in South Florida has been effective in making drug smugglers wary of using Florida as their point of entry.

Much of this traffic is now finding its way through our Golden Gulf Coast.

MCCC believes the additional Bureau of Narcotics agents must be approved to head off massive problems like those in South Florida.

MCCC encourages every voter to immediately contact their legislators to secure their vote for these bills. MCCC is sponsoring legislative candidates (Rep. Dennis Collins and Senator Bob Uley, both of Gulfport) who are our special recognition and thanks to our legislators.

Sincerely,
John F. Heilman
Executive Director
Mississippi Crime Commission

Application of sewage to farm land eyed

By JIMMY BONNER
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Against a backdrop of expensive alternatives to handling municipal wastes, officials are rediscovering the original technique in waste disposal—land application.

Applying the wastes to agricultural land has important advantages over other traditional alternatives to waste disposal, according to Dr. Donald Epp, professor of agricultural economics and assistant director of the Institute for Research on Land and Water Resources at Pennsylvania State University.

Using agricultural land for disposing municipal sewage has potential in Mississippi and in other southern states where large amounts of agricultural land are available.

Epp spoke on that potential as an alternative to solving water pollution problems during a conference on water policy in the South recently in Memphis.

Epp said conventional methods of treating municipal sewage in the last decade have come up short as treatments often have been found to be sources of water pollution.

In handling wastes, officials are faced with relocating the effluent, or waste water, as well as the solid portion of the waste known as sludge.

In the past, the city dump or a vacant field frequently was used," Epp said. "Bigger coastal cities dumped it in the ocean. A few communities increnated it. All of these methods pose hazards and have been eliminated or severely restricted as options."

Epp said finding alternatives to treat sewage and acceptable ways to dispose of effluent and sludge are difficult because of expense and other concerns.

"If we rely on chemical-physical techniques to remove the chemicals from the effluent, treatment costs will skyrocket," Epp said. "Landfills that meet the requirements for sludge disposal are scarce and transportation to acceptable locations is expensive."

Applying the sewage to agricultural land is one alternative to the problem. Calling it "new management to an old solution," Epp said land application works well for at least some communities and possibly many.

Epps said materials of most concern in effluent which often lead to pollution in rivers and lakes are organic matter, nitrogen and phosphorus. Ironically, farmers spend millions of dollars each year for the same materials to fertilize crops.

"These nutrients stimulate growth of aquatic plants and algae, reducing the levels of dissolved oxygen in the stream or lake," Epp said. "This in turn causes fish to die and serious odor problems." But Epp said these same substances, which are pollutants in the water, are valuable when applied to cropland or forests.

Epp said tests at Penn State have shown that land application is a realistic solution to waste disposal in many areas. But he emphasized that more research is needed to determine the economic feasibility and to ensure that harmful effects do not occur.

The tests revealed some management problems when the effluent is applied to crops through irrigation. For example, some crops such as corn cannot tolerate the high water application levels needed to handle large quantities of effluent and yields are reduced under the high rates.

"Crops must be selected that remove nutrients from the water as it moves through the soil to prevent contamination with ground water," Epp said. "Crops also should be marketable to offset part of the application costs and tolerate waste water application for most or all of the year."

In conducting the tests, evaluations were made to examine the costs of various cropping systems in handling effluent from a sewage treatment plant discharging three million gallons of effluent daily, enough to serve a community to 25,000 to 30,000 people.

Based on the tests, total annual costs for one crop were $493,000. Costs were higher with low application rates because more crop acreage is required and expenses are involved in storing the effluent, which is necessary when the material cannot be applied regularly.

"These costs" can be expected to be substantially lower than other alternatives for small to medium sized treatment plants," Epp said. "Costs would be reduced if the cropping system permits year-round application of effluents at high application rates."

In addressing sludge disposal, Epp said farmers in many parts of the nation are using the material as a source of plant nutrients and to increase organic matter in soils. Epp said in Pennsylvania, typical sludge is worth about $10 per acre in nutrient value.

Use of the sludge also is gaining in popularity as a nutrient source for regenerating disturbed sites such as stripped-mine areas, new highway construction, shopping centers, industrial sites and in other areas where it is difficult to establish a plant cover.

Epp said while plant nutrients in sludge are beneficial to crops, sludge also may contain pollutants which must be carefully monitored to determine where the material can be applied. "Sludge must be carefully managed for these contaminants," Epp said. "The important thing is that these materials can be managed without creating a danger to people who consume the crops."

Epp said because of fear of contamination and other concerns, a major obstacle to using land application for waste disposal is gaining public acceptance in areas where the material is to be applied.

The economist said citizens are rightfully concerned about possible contaminants in the sludge or effluent that may have long-lasting effects on the quality of land or water in the application area.

"Wise management of waste materials requires that

Coast Crime Commission names Herman president

H. Richard Herman, Gulfport, has been elected president of the Mississippi Coast Crime Commission.

Herman, vice president of Stewart-Sneed-Hewes Insurance, succeeds John McFarland, Col. Pat MacManus, Don H. Roberts, D'Aubrey H. Schiel, Ruth Simmons, and Gene Warr.

John E. Montgomery, public accountant, Gulfport, continues as executive director. Plans for a number of projects to be instituted in 1983 were reviewed, including a "Law Enforcement Recognition" event in April; a "Court Watchers" program similar to those in other communities;

Other officers elected are Ruth Simmons, Long Beach, vice president, and Alicia Ellis of Pass Christian, secretary-treasurer.

Officers and directors were elected at the annual meeting of the commission at the Gulfport Chamber of Commerce Tuesday afternoon.

Seven new directors were elected at the meeting. They are: Drew Allen, executive vice president, Allen Beverages Inc.; Gordon D. Burton, general manager, Morco China; V.J. Daniel Jr., retired chairman of the board, Mississippi Power Co.; Jim Frisela, manager, Royal d'Iberville Hotel; A.E. Nichols Jr., manager, residential marketing, Mississippi Power Co.; James Bo Roberts, rector, St. Mark's Episcopal Church; Chunn Sneed, president, Gulf National Bank.

Other members of the board of directors continuing to serve include Beth Bond, Col. Ken Combs, Bobby J. Dunwoody, Alicia Ellis, H. Richard Herman, Bon B. Huey, D.D. King, John McFarland, Col. Pat MacManus, Don H. Roberts, D'Aubrey H. Schiel, Ruth Simmons, and Gene Warr.

The directors unanimously endorsed pending legislation on drunk driving penalties; "open records" of public affairs; increasing the Mississippi Narcotics Bureau staff; and making mandatory prison sentences for those convicted of smuggling drugs.

The next regular meeting of the directors will be Tuesday, Feb. 8, at 4 p.m., in the Conference Room of Gulf Publishing Company.

Tompkins is district 'Trooper of The Year'

Eleven Highway Patrol officers will be honored in Jackson on Monday, Feb. 21 when a statewide "Trooper of the Year" is named by the Mississippi District Exchange Clubs.

Signey B. Berry, commissioner of public safety, said the 11 candidates were selected by 578 fellow Mississippi state troopers based on their professionalism in the performance of duty.

The 7 p.m. dinner, sponsored by the North Jackson Exchange Club at the Holiday Inn North, climaxes seven weeks of district "Trooper of the Year" award presentations by Exchange Clubs throughout the state.

This is the second year the Mississippi District Exchange Clubs have sponsored the awards program which coincides with the National Exchange Club's Crime Prevention Program.

The recognition event was originated to strengthen and improve the effectiveness of law enforcement in Mississippi.

Candidates for the statewide "Trooper of the Year" award and their district-level presentation dates are:

Trooper Robert J. Tompkins of Saucier in the Gulfport District who was honored Tuesday at a noon luncheon at the Western Sizzlin in Gulfport by the Gulfport Exchange Club;

Giveans celebrate diamond wedding anniversary

By ELLIS CUEVAS
Pearlington residents Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Giveans celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Thursday.

A party was given by family members at the couple's residence, which was purchased by the Giveans for $150 two weeks after their marriage. The couple was married at the Main Street Methodist Church, Bay St. Louis on January 13, 1923.

They are the parents of one son, John Elliott Giveans, and one daughter, Marie Elaine Reynolds, both of Pearlinton.

Mrs. Giveans and her husband reared five of her brothers and sisters, as her mother died at the age of 44, leaving children from nine months old through grammar school age. Mr. Giveans, now retired as a bridge tender on the US-90 bridge at Pearlinton, also worked as a baker, tug boat deckhand and in sawmills of the area.

Mrs. Giveans, 76, is a Pearlinton native, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bennett. Mr. Giveans was born in Bay St. Louis and is 80 years old.

The couple has five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

They are members of the Pearlinton Methodist Church with many family members still residing in the community.

On their golden anniversary, the couple renewed their wedding vows.

St. Monica's Guild names 1983 officers

By JOE PILET

Miss Beatrice Collins, organist and choir director at Trinity Church in Pass Christian, was guest speaker when St. Monica's Guild met recently in the home of Mrs. Marvin Mingledorff. Miss Collins was introduced by Mrs. Walter Martin, program chairman. Collins spoke on "The Wonders of God's Lovely World."

Guild officers for the 1983 year include Mrs. J. Randolph Buck, president; Mrs. Walter A. Martin, vice president; Mrs. Duncos Stouse, treasurer; Mrs. Nunez C. (Joe) Pilet, recording secretary, and Mrs. J. Rollins Murray, corresponding secretary.

Mrs. John Frith was appointed over-all chairman for the Pink Tea, scheduled for Friday, Feb. 25 in the home of Mrs. J. Edgar Monroe, 845 East Scenic Drive in Pass Christian.

Mrs. Pilet was appointed to serve as publicist for the affair.

The Pink Tea, held annually as a social event in combination with a fund raising project for the guild, was established several decades ago as a tribute to Mrs. Abby-French and is considered a major social event of the winter season.

Gulf Coast residents, their guests and winter visitors are invited to attend this function.

An interesting anonymous letter with $20 enclosed was read to the group. It was written by a man who purchased a shirt at the recent rummage sale and found the money in one of the shirt pockets.

During the social hour following the guild meeting a silver and crystal tea service was presided over by Mrs. Theo. Moore and Mrs. Pilet.

The Mingledorff home is one of several in Pass Christian registered with the National Historic Society.

It is said to have been built at the turn of the century by a plumber who installed the first indoor plumbing in Pass Christian.

The house is situated on a narrow lot and has the original carriage drive.

The home is an attractive example of architecture of that era.

Exquisite camellias from the gardens of Mrs. Harrington Hilzim were placed at vantage points for the occasion.

FAMILY TREES ELUSIVE

State folks who may have read about Mississippi's recent acquisition of the 1910 U.S. Census and decide to drive to Jackson one messy winter day to tell the family tree from the forest of records at the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, stack it neatly in cords of family nostalgia, and haul it back home for less assiduous family members to warm over during the cold days ahead—should keep in mind a few facts of cataloged life.

It isn't easy. It doesn't happen fast. And it takes longer to subdue this centuries' old patriarchal tree with pencil and pad than it does most forest giants with the best chain saw on the market.

In preparation for this article this writer paid two special calls to this state's valuable storehouse of history located on the south lawn of the Old Capitol building.

On the second trip he finally began to catch on to the coding system that shows you which microfilm reel to thread into the audio-visual monster whose screen can well hold you in its captivating grip for hours on end. If you listened to the friendly and efficient attendant as instructions were given, you are one of the fortunate few, apparently. Most seem to retain mostly that little circular core of magical film in the palm of their hand and have all sort of trouble getting it properly threaded, rightside up, and in focus. Then, there are the all-knowing casual observers of the genealogical pros who snugly sit by you either too absorbed in their own findings to pay you any mind or assistance, or who are enjoying your stumbling too much to interfere.

When all set, reel one does turn up some fascinating data. But first off, you're flabbergasted that there are so many Mississippi folks that shared your family name way, way back in 1910. Somehow, you tend to discard the embarrassment of Adam and Eve. Then suddenly, order comes out of chaos. But, the family surnames are not all together. The Prices and Parks and a few other monickers that share coding similarities are interspersed. But if you follow your surname according to alphabetical order of given names, you will eventually find your grandfather—provided he was the head of the household in 1910 and was home the day the census enumerator called at the door.

But suddenly you twitch a bit and salivate. There on a little white card in the census taker's own handwriting is grandpa. And below him are the grandmothers and all the uncles and aunts and their ages. The researcher must record this data and the county where they lived, the enumerator's district number and sheet number, and then you are ready to be launched by way of another coded microfilm reel to stage two. The second film gives more personal data—such as sex, race, age, marital status, occupation, and impersonal types of stuff.

And that essentially is what impact this new 1910 Census has on future genealogical research in Jackson. It opens a lot of doors fairly quickly and simply.

I asked the research staff members a few questions concerning typical problems faced by typical amateur researchers.

Lack of preparedness seems to be the biggest handicap. Some come in expecting to whack down their family tree and cart it off over their shoulder like a Christmas tree in half the time. No way! It takes a spell to learn to thread the machine and find the microfilms—no, to mention your fascination with the data flowing before your eyes that oftentimes diverts you from your real mission.

Next, researchers often fail to do their homework before leaving for Jackson. Talk to relatives, make notes, list names and dates and places. This will greatly facilitate your search.

But never expect to spend less than a full day in the wonderland of the library of the Mississippi Department of Archives and History!

Thanks to you...

THE MORMONS

Waveland Branch
Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

At a recent sacrament meeting of the combined congregations of the Waveland Ward and the Pearlington Branch of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormons), John S. Scott, president of the Gulfport Mississippi Stake of the Church, made two major announcements which will directly affect all Latter-Day Saints in this area.

First by authorization of the First Presidency of the Church, Salt Lake City, Utah, the membership of the Pearlington Branch will combine with the membership of the Waveland Ward until further notice. The combined groups will have a total membership of 341.

Scott then announced the final approval of plans for the expansion and renovation of the church's facilities located on the corner of McLaurin Street and Nicholson Avenue in Waveland.

Under a contract which was recently awarded to McClenon Building Service, of Gulfport, a 5,000-square-foot addition will be built to the existing facilities. This addition will house a new chapel, offices and classrooms.

Also, the present building will be renovated to include a multi-purpose room as well as classroom space.

With this final approval, Scott said that the work on the facilities should begin within the month.

The expansion and renovation of the Waveland facilities is indicative of the growth of the Church in this area. Congregational growth in the Gulf Coast area is estimated to be at the rate of approximately 25 percent annually.

The members of the Ward Bishopric cordially extend an open invitation to the general public to join the congregation in their Sunday worship services—Sacrament meeting, 9 a.m.; Sunday School and Primary, 10:15 a.m.; Priesthood, Relief Society and Young Women, 11 a.m.; and Fast and Testimony Meeting, first Sunday of each month, 9 a.m.

trials and tribulations for all those involved in the first days of the Church and that we are all subject today to our leaders and the laws of the Church and the land.

"We believe to being subject to kings, presidents, rulers, and magistrates, in obeying, honoring, and sustaining the law," he quoted from the Articles of Faith of the Church.

"When we became members of the gospel we took it upon ourselves to obey this Article of Faith," Bell added.

He said the only remembrances we have of our pre-existence is through revelation, and that revelation tells us that this earth life—this proving ground—is necessary for our exaltation.

"As you think of your pre-existence," Bell explained, "you will find it easy to believe that you chose to come here, to work out your individual exaltation."

He emphasized, "We should obey all things whatsoever the Lord our God should command us. Although we find it difficult to live all the laws, when we listen to the Church authorities and also obey the laws of the land we will grow and be proved to the good."

Bell reminded his listeners that the Constitution of the United States was formed by men who were inspired by God to preserve our liberty and that in the church the authority is set up by leaders through divine inspiration and revelation.

"The requests that our leaders make of us are sometimes hard for us to accomplish; but if we remember where their authority comes from, then it is easy to do the best we can in our callings."

"Remember," he urged, "we are designated the authority to act in Christ's name in each office and position through the prophet and then on down through the lines to the smallest units—when we don't do what the authorities of the Church asks us to do, we are not putting marks in the good book. We are putting marks in the bad book."

Bell and his wife, the former Nancy Janet Brehm of Natchez, have resided in Pearlington for the past 12 years and are the parents of four children and the grandparents of two.

Before the Pearlington Branch was formed 15 months ago, he served in many priesthood positions in the church in the Slidell area, including Elders Quorum president, ward clerk, executive secretary, and a counselor in the Branch Presidency.

He presently serves as a counselor in the Pearlington Branch Presidency as well as a high councilman for the Gulfport Mississippi Stake.

In his high council position, he is directly responsible for overseeing the activities and functions of the Elders Quorums of the Poyune and the Waveland Wards, and has a special Stake assignment in the area of family preparedness.

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." —John 10:10

By Shawn Murphy

MINISTER, BAY ST. LOUIS CHURCH OF CHRIST

Jesus and the parables he taught have been understood by so few. And unfortunately the ones who need understanding the most today, again will be blinded by the cares of this world.

THE GREAT BANQUET
When one of those at the table with him heard this, he said to Jesus, "Blessed is the man who will eat at the feast in the Kingdom of God."

Jesus replied: "A man was preparing a great banquet and invited many guests. At the time of the banquet he sent his servant to tell those who had been invited, 'Come, for everything is now ready.'"

The interpretation is obvious. The one having the banquet is God. And he now invites all men, through His Son, Jesus Christ, to be an eternal guest of His at the spiritual banquet which is His Kingdom.

The story continues: But they all alike began to make excuses. The first said, 'I have just bought a field and I must go and see it. Please excuse me.'

Another said, 'I have just bought five yoke of oxen, and I'm on my way to try them out. Please excuse me.'

Still another said, 'I just got married, so I can't come.'

There are as many excuses not to accept God's invitation as there are people in the world.

What's your excuse?

Is business going too well for you right now? Perhaps you just got married or divorced? Could it be that you are expecting a child?

Sure, your intentions are good. And you plan to accept the Lord's invitation at a more 'convenient time.' But then you know what the road to hell is paved with!

The story concludes:

"Then the Master told his servant, 'Go out to the roads and country lanes and make them come in, so that my house will be full. I tell you, not one of those men who were invited will get a taste of my banquet.'"

The central truth of the story is that no one who makes excuses for not following Jesus Christ is worthy of the Kingdom of God.

And even good intentions are worth little more than to pave a road headed in the opposite direction!

The truth of the matter is that the conclusion of the story is up to you.

God has prepared a banquet in your honor - will you come?

Christian Traditions

In The Footsteps Of Martin Luther

1983, the 500th anniversary of Martin Luther's birth, will see many tourists flying to places where he lived and worked.

Many Americans will be celebrating the 500th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther in 1983 by visiting the regions in Europe where Luther preached, worked and lived. In doing so, they will be literally following in the footsteps of Martin Luther.

One of the many Lufthansa German Airline's tours available, with April to October departures, is "Scenic Europe and the Heritage of Martin Luther," from American World Travel. Highlights include Eisenach, where Luther was born and died; Eisenach, where Luther (and incidentally, Bach) lived for a time; Wartburg Castle, where he translated the Bible from Latin to German; Erfurt, site of the Augustinian Monastery where he joined the Hermit's Order; and Wittenberg, where he worked from 1508 to 1546 and nailed his 95 Theses to the Castle Church door.

These places are all in the German Democratic Republic (East Germany). In West Germany, the tour visits Worms, site of the famous Diet in which Luther defended his Protestantism and other destinations.

Another ten-day escorted tour, "In the Path of Martin Luther," is offered by Lufthansa as an extension of the tour. This tour visits these places and more. Other points on the itinerary in West Germany are Coburg, where Luther lived during the Protestant presentation of the Augsburg Confession to Lufthansa.

The magnificent Cathedral in Worms, where Luther defended his Protestantism.

and Nuremberg, whose museum is staging an historical exhibition for his anniversary. "In Quest of Martin Luther," from Lufthansa and Kuoni Travel visits the known but fascinating cities in the heart of Germany, following Luther's path from birth to death, as well as his remarkable achievements. This tour, an escorted 2-week program, encompasses both East and West Germany.

Other longer tours include Austria and Switzerland, and cover the important points in Martin Luther's life and work. Free brochures on all of these different programs celebrating the 500th anniversary of Martin Luther are available from Protestant presentation of the Augsburg Confession to Lufthansa.

POINT OF LAW

Mississippi State Bar

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some legal rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult an attorney when in doubt about your rights.)

Q: What are the rights of an individual when a creditor attempts to repossess furniture or household items?

A: If an individual buys an item, such as a television, from a store, and pays for the item over a period of time, the store will probably retain what is known as a security interest in the item.

If the buyer has signed an agreement giving the store a security interest in the item, then the store will usually have the right to come and retake, or "repossess" the item if the buyer does not make his payments.

However, the store can only repossess the item itself if it can do so without a breach of the peace, or disturbance.

If the buyer refuses to allow the store employee to enter his house and retake the item, the store employee may not force his way in or threaten the buyer with harm.

Instead, the store must bring an action in court to regain possession of the item. The buyer should be aware, however, that if he has not made payment, the store generally does have a legal right to retake the item eventually.

Q: Can a creditor retake a car or truck without the owner's permission?

A: Since a car or truck is not kept indoors as are the household items discussed in the question above, the creditor with a security interest in a car can usually repossess the car when the buyer defaults in payments. Again, the law simply requires that the repossession take place without a breach of the peace.

The buyer's permission is not required in order for a creditor to repossess a car which is sitting on the street.

REAL VIEWS ON REAL ESTATE

By Dr. Dennis Toth

GENERAL WARRANTY DEED

I accepted an offer on our house and was surprised to see that the sales contract included a typed provision that I was to give the buyer a general warranty deed to the property. Am I correct to assume that this is common practice?

Dear E.R.:
Yes, you are correct to assume that the conveyance of property through a general warranty deed is common practice. In fact, as you noted in the sales contract, such wording is normally included in preprinted contracts.

A general warranty deed contains covenants in which the grantor formally guarantees that good and marketable title is being conveyed.

In some states, this type of deed is called a full covenant and warranty deed. Good title is one which is free from encumbrances such as liens, pending litigation and other such defects.

Marketable or merchantable title is one which is free from reasonable doubts or objections and which the courts would compel a purchaser to accept under the terms of a sales contract.

A general warranty deed gives the grantee (buyer) legal recourse against the grantor (seller) in the event that the title is not as represented.

This deed provides the purchaser with the greatest number of assurances and is considered the most desirable type of deed which can be received.

In order for the purchaser to be legally entitled to receive a general warranty deed, a provision must be inserted in the original sales contract; otherwise the seller is only required to give a quitclaim deed, which contains no guarantees or assurances.

For answers to questions, write Dr. Dennis Toth, P. O. Box 295, University, Miss. 38677.
